We have to surrender to the word of God, allow it to master us, change us — and most of us object to that. We are too full of our own noise to listen properly. The phrase inclina aurem cordis tui is important for understanding both the scope and the intention of the listening to which we are exhorted. In themselves, the words are unremarkable, an ecclesiastical commonplace, but when Benedict uses them, I think he is reminding us that the heart is the
