The House of Hunger is painful to read, painful to ponder, and I found it brought my own experience of childhood homelessness to the front of my mind. In this book, Dambudzo stood in his experience, acted out his life in it, and foists it upon the reader. It's a tour-de-force of the author's indelible trauma and subsequent mental illness.

House of Hunger was, by some accounts, written in exile in Oxford in a small tent alongside the River Isis. Yet its opening sentences forge a powerful connection between all dumping grounds, be they Third World locations and shantytowns or First World waste spaces: "I got my things and left. The sun was coming up. I couldn't think where to go.
